The former opposition leader and his team said there was overwhelming evidence of sabotage from certain staffers in Labour headquarters. The officials, who are not named, were uncooperative and refused to allocate resources to winnable target seats, the submission said. Guardian 9 04.12.2021	Call for Tory peer Michelle Mone to resign as accuser speaks out in alleged racism row The Conservative peer Michelle Mone is accused of sending allegedly racist messages to a man of Indian heritage during a disagreement following a fatal yacht crash off Monaco in May 2019. In the weeks after the crash, in which a crew member was killed, Mone accused a career banker and financial consultant Richard Lynton-Jones and his partner of partying soon after the accident and showing disrespect. Mone cast doubt on whether Lynton-Jones’s partner had really suffered serious trauma due to the accident, and described her as “a mental loony”. She also told Lynton-Jones, he was “a waste of a man’s white skin”. Lynton-Jones told the Guardian that Mone’s WhatsApp message had caused him severe distress, motivating him to make the complaint to the House of Lords commissioner for standards. A representative of the Tory peer said: “Baroness Mone is 100% not a racist. Baroness Mone and her husband have built over 15 schools in Africa in the past three years.” Her lawyers said their client believed at the time that Lynton-Jones had “no trace whatsoever of non-white colouring or any features” that would suggest he was not “100% white and British”. In an Instagram post Mone claimed that Lynton-Jones had displayed “white privilege”. “Since when did calling out a man on his actions after a manslaughter and his entitled white privilege constitute racism?” she posted. https://www.theguardian.com/politics/2021/dec/04/call-for-tory-peer-michelle-mone-to-resign-as-accuser-speaks-out-in-alleged-racism-row (16.12.2021)	complaint (7) accus* (3) denied (2) justification (1)	Politik Rassismus

07.10.2021	An anonymous group was campaigning to remove Kathleen Stock, a professor of philosophy at the University of Sussex, from her job amid accusations of transphobia. Stock had previously said she is “at odds” with a large section of academics. She had said she believes gender identity is not more important than facts about biological sex “particularly when it comes to law and policy”. In January, hundreds of academics criticised the decision to give Stock an OBE for services to higher education in the New Year honours list. In an open letter, they condemned academics who use their status to “further gender oppression” and said they denounced “transphobia in all its forms”. The letter said: “Trans people are already deeply marginalised in society, facing well-documented discrimination, ranging from government policy to physical violence. Discourse like that Stock is producing and amplifying contributes to these harms, serving to restrict trans people’s access to life-saving medical treatments, encourage the harassment of gender-non-conforming people, and otherwise reinforce the patriarchal status quo. We are dismayed that the British government has chosen to honour her for this harmful rhetoric.” Three weeks after a protest by some students at the university’s Brighton campus, which included posters and graffiti calling for her dismissal, Stock has announced her resignation from the University of Sussex. https://www.theguardian.com/education/2021/oct/07/university-defends-academic-freedoms-after-calls-to-sack-professor + https://www.theguardian.com/world/2021/oct/28/sussex-professor-kathleen-stock-resigns-after-transgender-rights-row (16.12.2021)	accusations (1) harassment (1) criticised (1) condemned (1)	Universität

The Conservative peer and Brexit minister was grilled in person by assembly members on Stormont's Executive Office Committee, which is scrutinising issues arising from Brexit, on Friday. Lord Frost argued that the post-Brexit agreement could have been better negotiated if it were not for the work done by the team of Boris Johnson's predecessor as prime minister. "I would say that it was the inheritance that we inherited from the previous Government and from the previous negotiating team that has been a significant part of the difficulty and the reason the Protocol is shaped as it is because we had a particular inheritance from the previous team who could not get their deal, rightly in my view, through Parliament." The episode of Celebrities: What Happened to Your Face? featured medical professionals dissecting how the reality TV star's physical appearance had changed over the years with surgeons making numerous offensive comments about her "cookie-cutter" and "plastic" face. Crosby called the programme "immoral" and "insensitive". In a statement, the broadcaster apologised for "any upset caused" and said that Channel 5 and the show's producers, Crackit Productions, "take duty of care very seriously". "While we acknowledge that the programme was Ofcom-compliant, we have taken on board Charlotte's feedback and removed the episode from our streaming platform My5," the statement read. https://www.theguardian.com/media/2021/apr/26/channel-5-pulls-immoral-plastic-surgery-show-about-charlotte-crosbys-appearance (14.12.2021)	apolog* (2) responsibility (2) sorry (1) condemnation (1) offensive (1)	Medien Prominenz

	England cricketer Alex Hales has apologised for “all the offence” caused after a picture of him in blackface emerged. The Nottinghamshire opener had attended a New Year’s Eve party back in 2009 with his face and upper body painted black. He later said that he was paying tribute to the late rapper Tupac Shakur with his appearance at the party. "I obviously realise that this is incredibly disrespectful and I want to apologise for all the offence this has no doubt caused. It was incredibly reckless and foolish on my behalf, so I want to apologise for that, apologise to the club for the embarrassment it would have caused them.“ After the pictures emerged, Hales’ club Nottinghamshire said they had extended the scope of their investigation into his historic conduct as a result. https://www.mirror.co.uk/sport/cricket/alex-hales-blackface-apology-racism-25495945 (20.12.2021)	offence (1)

Telegraph 6 25.10.2021	Met Police to apologise for failings over sisters murdered in London park In June 2020, sisters Nicole Smallman and Bibaa Henry were murdered in a north London park as they celebrated Ms Henry's birthday. Their family and friends made contact with the Met Police the following day to report them missing, but relatives felt that officers were dismissive of their concerns and did not take the report seriously. A year later the Independent Office for Police Conduct, which launched a probe into the Met's handling of the case, concluded that the level of service provided to the family was "unacceptable". Dame Cressida Dick, the Met Commissioner, accepted the findings of the IOPC investigation and admitted her force's response "was below the standard we should have achieved and compounded the distress felt by their loved ones". She said: "I am very sorry that the level of service we provided fell short. We have contacted the family to ask if they will allow me or, if they prefer, another senior officer to visit them at a time that is right to apologise in person." However, the mother of two murdered sisters dismissed the apology as too late, saying that the Met's actions suggested signs of "racial profiling, misogyny or classism" and Dame Cressida's "job was essentially to protect the brand". "‘Sorry’ is something you say when you comprehend the wrong you do and take full responsibility for it, demonstrating that by taking appropriate proportionate action – which to our minds is not going to happen," Ms Smallman said in the wake of the IOPC's findings. "The investigation was not handled appropriately. The apology should have been done face to face and not nearly 10 months later." "‘Sorry’ just won't cut it. 	The flagship Conservative council that owned Grenfell Tower has said sorry for putting profits before people in a series of deals, struck before the 2017 fire, that leased out public property for commercial gain. “Before 2017 the council did not find the right balance between financial benefits, and social benefits,” Elizabeth Campbell, the leader of the Royal Borough of Kensington and Chelsea (RBKC), said. “Too often the council put the narrow goal of generating commercial income above the broader aim of delivering benefits to our wider community. We fell below the bar on consultation, transparency, scrutiny, and policy. We cannot say hand on heart that residents were involved every step of the way, or that the council put their interests first and foremost, and for that we apologise.” Campbell’s apology came as the council released an independent report into the transactions that found shortcomings with scrutiny of decisions but concluded there had been no wrongdoing. Campbell said “no wrongdoing does not mean you were doing everything right”. She said there was is a “depth of feeling and mistrust that still exists between the council and parts of our communities”. Ed Daffarn, a Grenfell survivor who questioned several of the property deals before the fire, said: “It is high time that RBKC started taking ownership of its past misdemeanours as there can be no recovery for the Grenfell community without truth.” https://www.theguardian.com/uk-news/2021/feb/26/grenfell-tower-council-apologises-for-prioritising-profits-in-borough (14.12.2021)
Guardian 9 04.07.2021	Essex University makes further apology in trans rights row A university has apologised to transgender and non-binary staff and students over a review that suggested it had unlawfully no-platformed two female academics whom some had accused of transphobia. The vice-chancellor of Essex University has written to staff and students to say sorry for the timing of the highly critical report, which was released shortly before exams and Pride month, and for the stress under which it had placed staff and students. The report said the university’s policy on supporting trans and non-binary staff was based on a misinterpretation of the law and that some members of the institution believed “gender-critical academics can legitimately be excluded”. It was commissioned after two gender-critical academics had speaking engagements cancelled amid claims they were spreading transphobic views and engaging in hate speech that would cause harassment to students. https://www.theguardian.com/education/2021/jul/04/essex-university-makes-further-apology-in-trans-rights-row (16.12.2021)	apolog* (5) sorry (2) concerned (1)	Transphobie Universität

	Benjamin Monk used excessive force on him during an arrest in Telford, Shropshire. The family of ex-footballer Dalian Atkinson have received an apology from the head of the force, Pippa Mills, following his death at the hands of an officer. In the document, she wrote that due to the European Convention on Human Rights, there was an "obligation" for her to write to them on behalf of the force to "acknowledge and accept" that his human rights were breached in this case. "Ben Monk's conduct was in direct contradiction to the standards and behaviour of the policing service, and understandably undermined public confidence." She added: "I am deeply sorry for the devastating impact the actions of a West Mercia officer has caused you and I extend my deepest condolences to you all, and Dalian's wider family and friends." https://www.mirror.co.uk/news/uk-news/police-formally-apologise-family-ex-25791465 (02.01.2022)	deepest condolences (1) accountability (1)

The presenter gave her apology to her Twitter following for pressing the like button on "offensive" posts which sparked outrage on social media. She wrote: "I 'liked' tweets today that were offensive in nature about the use of the British flag as a backdrop in a government interview this morning. I have since removed these 'likes'. This do not represent the views of me or the BBC. I apologise for any offence taken. Naga." However, not everyone agreed that Naga should apologise as some fans jumped to her defence on social media. https://www.mirror.co.uk/tv/tv-news/bbc-breakfasts-naga-munchetty-apologises-23757463 + https://www.mirror.co.uk/tv/tv-news/charlie-stayt-leaves-naga-muchetty-23754841 (20.12.2021)	apolog* (11) outrage (3) offence (1)	Politik TV

Telegraph 5 01.11.2021	Archbishop of Canterbury says sorry after comparing climate inaction to ignoring the Nazis	[unequivocally] apologise / issue a	Kirche Klimadebatte

	The Archbishop of Canterbury has apologised after suggesting world leaders who failed to act on climate change were like those who ignored warnings about the Nazis in the 1930s. On Monday, the Archbishop told the BBC that world leaders "will be cursed if they don't get this right". The Archbishop later issued a public apology on his Twitter feed, writing: "I unequivocally apologise for the words I used when trying to emphasise the gravity of the situation facing us at Cop26. "It's never right to make comparisons with the atrocities brought by the Nazis, and I'm sorry for the offence caused to Jews by these words." https://www.telegraph.co.uk/politics/2021/11/01/archbishop-canterbury-says-sorry-comparing-climate-inaction (07.12.2021)	public apology (3) sorry [for the offence] (2)	Nationalsozialismus
Mirror 1 24.11.2021	Gary Lineker apologised to James Milner after being wrong about Liverpool star Match of the Day presenter Gary Lineker apologised personally to Liverpool star James Milner after he questioned his importance. Despite the Milner's long and successful career, his skillset was not as obvious to Lineker as it was to Reds boss Klopp. Indeed, the presenter took to his social media on several occasions to question Milner's importance at Anfield and why he was so well loved by his various managers. Back in March 2016, Lineker tweeted, "His managers seem to love James Milner. Clearly he can play anywhere across midfield, but remain unconvinced personally." Lineker's querying of Milner's talents continued and later than year, as England were preparing for Euro 2016, he once again questioned his prominence. Lineker has since come round to accept his misjudgement of the player and has even gone on to express his regret directly to Milner. Lineker said: "I actually apologised to him on air. A few years ago I tweeted something. He always played in different positions and I did a tweet along the lines of 'I don't really know what James Milner is'. I was wrong, because actually what he is is an unbelievably brilliant professional who will play anywhere for you. I apologised and he took it with great spirit." https://www.mirror.co.uk/sport/football/news/liverpool-james-milner-gary-lineker-25531586 (20.12.2021)	apolog* (5) criticising (1) misjudgement (1) regret (1) wrong (1)	Sport

Mirror 5 07.01.2021	Lorraine Kelly apologises to Eddie Izzard for misgendering her during interview Television presenter Lorraine Kelly has apologised to comedian Eddie Izzard for misgendering her during an interview on Thursday's show. Lorraine said: "Just before Christmas you were in the news wanting to be known as 'she' now, and so can I apologise to you if I get that wrong. Because we are still kind of just going along with it." Eddie accepted Lorraine's apology graciously and said she does not generally mind too much, but prefers she/her pronouns when she is presenting as a woman, as she was on the show. https://www.mirror.co.uk/tv/tv-news/lorraine-kelly-apologises-eddie-izzard-23276315 (20.12.2021)	apolog* (5)	Gender Diskriminierung
Mirror 7 01.09.2021	Michelle Heaton breaks down on Lorraine after confessing to past backstage boozing Former Liberty X singer Michelle Heaton broke down apologising to Lorraine Kelly for drinking before appearing on the daytime show in the past. Speaking on Lorraine, Heaton discussed her battle with alcohol addiction and the impact that it has had on her family. However, in her own live chat with Lorraine herself, a tearful Heaton apologised to the presenter for her past drinking too, admitting that she used to drink before coming on the show previously. "Just off the back of that, I wanted to apologise to you before we begin. Because there were times where I drank before i sat on this sofa and you trusted me and I did campaigns for you and I love you so much because you've always been there to support me and i just wanted to say sorry." Lorraine said: „Don't be daft, you don't have to apologise to me or to anybody else.“ https://www.mirror.co.uk/tv/tv-news/michelle-heaton-tearfully-apologises-lorraine-24883264 (20.12.2021)	apolog* (4) say sorry (1)	Alkoholmissbrauch
